The two things I love are storytelling and color. Storytelling is at the core of each piece that I make. The pieces capture an important moment in a character's journey and explore what the rest of that journey could be. The colors I use are what bring these stories to life. Bright and vibrant colors best capture the mood of each piece and the magic in that moment. Together they let me freely create new characters, worlds, and, of course, stories. Since I was little, I have had a passion for creating in the arts and that passion has continued to this day. Outside of painting, I create in various mediums. I can often be found performing improv and sketch comedy on different stages in Chicago. I also have a love for video and have written and filmed shorts, sketches, documentaries, and music videos. No matter the medium, I always aim to bring new stories to life and I cannot wait to create more.
