ANTHONY PACK

Combining basic woodworking skills, found objects and a quirky sense of humor, I try to touch the inner child within people through my artwork.

Most of my work is comprised of recycled materials. I use found objects to inspire my ideas, drawing on my sense of humor to see them for what they could be, rather than limit them to their intended purpose. For instance, nails, screws and washers might become eyes, springs a mouth or neck, rusty nails get a second life as hands or feet, and painted scrap lumber becomes the body of the figure.
