

GERALD PATTERSON

After studying science at Iowa State University, Gerald (Jerry) Patterson relocated to the high country of Colorado, and began to pursue his passion for crafting fine collectible glass. He completed his apprenticeship under professional glassblower Garth Mudge at Glassworks Studio & Gallery in Estes Park.

Breathtaking mountain vistas, lush alpine meadows, clear rushing rivers and winter winds howling over snowy pine forests offer Jerry abundant inspiration for his elegant creations. Innovative, often experimental techniques give his work a refreshing originality. Jerry's hand-blown glass designs attract attention wherever they are displayed.

Jerry is a full-time artist at Glassworks Studio & Gallery, where visitors are invited to watch as he transforms red-hot molten glass with grace into unique bowls, vases and ornaments. When he isn't blowing glass, Jerry may be found hiking and mountain biking with his dog, Tundra, or dancing to some good ol' high country bluegrass.